Associate Senior Vice President, Compliance

for a discussion on

The Birth (and Evolution) of Compliance

In 1979, the year of WIM's founding, compliance as a business function did not yet exist in educational institutions. In fact, it wasn't until 1999, when Laura LaCorte established the USC Office of Compliance to assist faculty, staff and students in following laws, policies and regulations that apply to the university, that compliance became a relevant at USC. Ms. LaCorte will share with us her perspective on how compliance has evolved since the founding of the office, and what impact societal, technical, and economic issues may or may not have had on its evolution.

Particular areas of responsibility include research compliance, conflicts of interest, physician billing, healthcare compliance and information security. As the university's privacy officer, she is responsible for implementing a program to comply with the requirements of the privacy regulations of the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA). In addition to serving as the university's privacy officer, she also oversees the Department of Contracts and Grants for both UPC and HSC.
